YOUTH AS LEADERS FOR PEACE (TOT)

Youth-led enterprise development support services to build the longer-term capacities of market and enterprises.

1. Who is the Danish Refugee Council?

Founded in 1956, the Danish Refugee Council (DRC) is a leading international NGO (Non-Government Organizations) and one of the few with a specific expertise in forced displacement. Active in 40 countries with 9,000 employees and supported by 7,500 volunteers, DRC protects, advocates, and builds sustainable futures for refugees and other displacement affected people and communities. DRC works during displacement at all stages: In the acute crisis, in displacement, when settling and integrating in a new place, or upon return. DRC provides protection and life-saving humanitarian assistance; supports displaced persons in becoming self-reliant and included into hosting societies; and works with civil society and responsible authorities to promote protection of rights and peaceful coexistence.

DRC has been operational in Iraq since 2003 serving the needs of populations impacted by displacement, including refugees, IDPs (internally displaced persons), returnees, and host community. Our programming encompasses multiple governorates in Federal Iraq and the Kurdistan Region of Iraq, and includes protection, economic recovery, shelter and settlements, WASH, and humanitarian disarmament and peacebuilding programming.

2. Purpose of the training agency/provider

The Danish Refugee Council based in Iraq seeks proposals from a training provider/agency to deliver training of trainers (ToT) to youth leaders in Diyala governorate (Baquba and Muqdadia) selected by the Danish Refugee Council.

3. Background of the project

Despite the territorial defeat of the so-called Islamic State (IS) Iraq faces enduring and multi-faceted challenges to peace and stability. Weak governance structures, continuing IS activity, unaddressed ethno-religious and tribal grievances, and a fragmented security landscape present challenges to an inclusive recovery. Widespread population displacement during the 2014-2018 conflict and ensuing returns has placed stressors on already limited basic services, triggered competition for scarce livelihoods opportunities, and engendered further insecurity within a disrupted social fabric. A generation of Diyala youth have grown up within the context of fragile community relations and instability, and face an uncertain future characterized by limited political, social, and economic prospects. Because of their exclusion from economic life, insufficient educational provision, difficulty accessing housing, and other grievances, youth do not identify with or feel commitment to existing political structures, which further feeds disenfranchisement. These frustrations have been visible in recent protest movements. At the same time, many youths maintain a clear vision of what peace should be and aspire to a future without violence.

This project will contribute to the reduced vulnerability of at-risk men and women youth to violence and radicalization in Diyala governorate, Iraq. In partnership with a local NGO, DRC will support men and women youth in Muqdadiya and Baquba districts to work together across divides in their community as positive actors of change and will anchor vulnerable and at-risk male and female youth, so they are operating as networked and economically resilient actors. This will result in four, interrelated outcomes, reaching an anticipated 3,010 individuals:

- Increased capacity of a national partner to sustainably conduct youth-led community social cohesion and peacebuilding activities through technical and organizational capacity-strengthening support, with the aim of supporting them to continue to lead in these areas in the future.
- Increased skills among men and women youth to identify and analyze conflicts, facilitate dialogues, mobilize community members, and engage in collaborative conflict resolution.
- Increased connection and access of men and women youth to their community and key community stakeholders through youth-led community dialogues culminating in a youth plan for peace, social cohesion initiatives, and a community-prioritized project.
- Improved entrepreneurial and employment capacities among socio-economically vulnerable and/or at-risk men and women youth through the delivery of enterprise development and employment support,
- Increased connection and access of youth men and women to business networks and market linkages through youth-led enterprise development support services, YESE camp, and market linkage events.

DRC is a longstanding INGO in Iraq, with an extensive program providing consumption and economic recovery support to conflict affected populations across the country. The beneficiary profile of the economic recovery program includes all categories of population, i.e., IDPs, refugees, returnees, and host communities. The program portfolio on economic recovery is divided into three major areas—relief, recovery, and longer-term resilience.

- i. Relief: Under this, DRC provides consumption support to extremely vulnerable displacement and conflict affected populations. The assistance is provided through multi-purpose cash grants to households.
- ii. Recovery: Through its economic recovery interventions, DRC uses multiple programming approaches which are further divided into two areas: i.e., self-employment, and ii. wage employment
- iii. Longer term resilience: DRC under its resilience pillar is working to address the root causes of economic inequalities through system-based approaches with special focus on agriculture and food sectors. The aim is to address the root causes which are drivers of conflict and displacement.

DRC's program is designed to serve as a bridge between humanitarian assistance and longer-term recovery and development strategies by identifying entry-points to assistance for households at different vulnerability stages: addressing basic needs and reducing reliance on negative coping strategies for extremely vulnerable households, and job creation and income generation for vulnerable households for sustainable livelihoods.

DRC's Iraq economic recovery program strategy is transitioning toward longer term recovery and development with application of market systems development approaches. Agriculture is one priority sector identified for recovery and longer-term development which has potential to create employment and provide sustainable income opportunities for conflict affected population recovering from the crisis impacts.

4. Objective of the Training

In response to the youth's peacebuilding program, DRC aims to provide business development skills to the youth leaders building their capacity on business ecodevelopment support as well as the existing and potential entrepreneurs.
